WON'T ANNUL MARRIAGE.

But Prince George and Princess Isabelle May Be Divorced.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—The marriage troubles of Prince George of Bavaria were the subject of the following announcement, issued officially to-day by the Lord Chamberlain to the Regent of Bavaria, Prince Leopold:

"Public attention has recently and repeatedly been called to the deeply regrettable domestic conflict which has arisen between Prince George of Bavaria and his wife, Princess Isabelle. It is hereby stated that all reports to the effect that there is ground for declaring the marriage null and void are entirely unfounded. It is the truth that from the very beginning there has been profound incompatibility between the couple, which springs from differences in their characters, and on account of which the marital relationship between them has been utterly destroyed. If a dissolution of the marriage should take place, it could only be by way of divorce."
