

NOTES ON THE DECIPHERMENT OF TARTESSIAN AS CELTIC

TERRENCE KAUFMAN
<kaanbahlam@gmail.com>

TABLE OF CONTENTS

- [0] Introduction/Preface/Foreword
- [1] The Tartessian Inscriptions, the Tartessian Polity, and the Tartessian Language
- [2] Tartessian is Celtic
 - [2.1] Koch's Argument that Tartessian is Celtic
 - [2.2] Another "decipherment" of Tartessian as Celtic
 - [2.3] Celtichood
- [3] The Tartessian Writing System
 - [3.1] The names of the letters in the Phoenician Consonantal Alphabet
 - [3.2] The Tartessian alpha-syllabary
 - [3.3] Punctuation and other formatting
 - [3.4] Origin of the Tartessian alpha-syllabary
 - [3.5] A Later Manifestation?
 - [3.6] Transcription practices
- [4] Some methodological points on decipherment
- [5] Conclusions Regarding the Linguistic Features of Tartessian
 - [5.1] Diachronic Phonology
 - [5.2] Tartessian Sound System
 - [5.2.1] Tartessian Phoneme Inventory
 - [5.2.2] Distribution of Vowel Length
 - [5.2.3] Distribution of Consonant Gemination
 - [5.2.4] More on Stress in Tartessian
 - [5.2.5] Pronunciation of /z/
 - [5.2.6] Spelling of Diphthongs

[5.2.7] Variation within the Tartessian corpus

[5.3] Lexical and Morphological Peculiarities

[5.3.1] The verb <n-a-z-ke-e->

[5.3.2] Mysterious derivational suffix {.a:y.o-}

[5.4] Verbs

[5.4.1] Verb Suffixes

[5.4.2] Excursus: the Celtic imperfect

[5.4.3] Paradigmatic Ablaut

[5.4.4] “to be”

[5.4.5] Auxiliary <ba-a>

[5.4.6] ta:- and sta:-

[5.4.7] ro- as a marker of perfective aspect

[5.4.8] Preverbs

[5.5] Syntax

[5.5.1] Tartessian Word Order

[5.5.2] Morphosyntactic Influence from Late
Egyptian around the Mediterranean

[5.6] Nominals

[5.6.1] Nominal Suffixes: case and number

[5.6.2] Pronouns

[5.6.3] Anaphoric Pronoun

[5.6.4] Demonstratives

[5.6.5] “they, them”

[6] The Position of Tartessian within Celtic

[6.1] Summary of Tartessian Grammatical Features with Relevance for Classification and Reconstruction

[6.2] Phonological Data and Conclusions on the Position of Tartessian within Celtic

[6.3.] Feedback from Eric Hamp

[7] Another “Decipherment” of Tartessian as Celtic

[8] Place names and personal names transmitted by Greeks and Romans

[8.1] Turdetanian Toponyms

[8.2] “Hipponic”

[8.2.1] para-Bask etymologies of Hipponic Turdetanian toponyms

[8.3] The element -uba

[9] Non-Celtic material in Tartessian

[10] Non-alpha-syllabic sources of Tartessian material

[11] Names

[12] Tartessian Texts transcribed and analyzed

[subdivided]

[13] Tartessian Vocabulary

[14] Indo-European words for ‘wolf’ and ‘fox’

[15] Abbreviations and conventions

[16] Bibliography